Growing up in an artistic home surrounded by a family of art collectors, Zion Ezri was immersed in the world of creativity from an early age.

Zion's artistic journey took flight in the late '90s when he lived and studied in New York City. The city's vibrant art scene provided endless inspiration. Weekend visits to flea markets and open-space galleries exposed him to groundbreaking exhibitions that profoundly shaped his creative vision.

A self-taught creator and designer, Zion draws inspiration from the Bauhaus movement, pop art icons, and ancient scripts. His work bridges the past and present, culminating in striking collections of 3D wall and free-standing sculptures. From totems and robots to masks and Hebrew-inspired designs, each piece reflects his distinctive style and passion for storytelling.

For many years, Zion has been at the forefront of the art world, collaborating with artists from diverse backgrounds as an art gallery owner. This experience has deepened his appreciation of creativity and enriched his own artistic journey.

Born in Jerusalem in 1971, Zion's connection to the city's ancient streets and timeless history continues to influence his work. He also pursued a dynamic academic path, earning a Bachelor of Science in NYC and a Master of Law from Bar-Ilan University, embodying his adventurous and multi-faceted approach to life.

"My childhood memories of playing with and fixing robot toys have shaped my artistic vision. Growing up in Jerusalem, surrounded by its rich history and culture, gave me a unique perspective on art and design. Inspired by iconic artworks and the Bauhaus movement, I create pieces that bring these experiences to life. To me, life itself is art."
